POLITICAL NOTES.

—Georgia has not a single Republican newspaper.

—Representative Halsey has repented and returned his back-pay.

—Chief Justice Chase is to have a monument in Cincinnati.

—The Reform ticket in Philadelphia is more than favorably received by the citizens.

—Ex-Sanator Pomeroy, of Kansas, has been offered a lucrative position in New York.

—Every Democratic politician in Schuylkill county is said to be a candidate for Congress.

—Many of the salary-garb Congressmen are investing their money and going out of politics.

—Hon. John B. Storm, Democratic member of Congress from Monroe and Carbon district, is putting his $5,000 back-pay to repairing his mansion.

—A Salt Lake journal says that the troops at Camp Douglas will not premit the Mormans to take part in decorating the graves of their dead comrades.

—A Washington special intimates that the President may make Attorney General Williams Cheif Justice, and appoint Judge Pierrepont his successor.

—The Reading Eagle says Hon. Jeremiah S. Black, is named for Chief Justice of U. S. Supreme court. If the ex-President of the bogus Confederacy had the appointment Black would receive it.

—Senator Sumner is said to have remarked to a friend on last Monday that he was waiting for deatn to present his motive and character properly before the American people.

—An Iowa Methodist minister knocked a Congressman down the other day for offering to give his back pay to a Sunday school of which the aforesaid minister is superintendent.

—Judge Bingham's friends indignantly withdraw his name from the standing candidacy for anything, being satisfied that the President intends to give the offices abroad to men above suspicion, as long as such can be found.

—Senator Cameron denies his reported efforts to remove Commissioner Douglass, and the President says no effort has been made with him, and none could succeed, as Douglass is the most honest and efficient Revenue Collector the Government ever had.

—Senator Pratt. of Indiana, says that he did not draw his back pay, but simply took what he had earned. If all the representatives had simply taken what they had earned, about ninety per cent. of them would have been compelled to borrow money to get them home.

—The Jefferson county Republicans have unanimously selected Hon. David Maclay, of Clarion, Senatorial Delegate, and Capt. A. J. Monks, of Jefferson county. Representative Delegate to the State Convention. They were instructed to use all honorable means to secure the nomination of Hon. I. C. Gordon for Supreme Judge.

—It is learned from an authoritative source that William M. Evarts is not regarded by the President as among the possible candidates for chief justice General Grant proposes to make the appointment after he shall have had a chance to ascertain public sentiment, and to this end he invites a public discussion on the merits of several gentlemen who are candidates.

—The Boston Journal thinks the President is only carrying out his declaration that he should have no policy to enforce against the will of the people in deferring the appointment of Chief Justice till after the meeting of Congress meantime consulting the popular will as expressed through the papers, ignoring purely partisan considerations.

—The New York Tribune mentions Lyman Trumbull as a candidate for the vacant Chief Justiceship, and its namesake of Chicago will doubtless re-echo the cry unceasingly. Mr. Trumbull's legal experience in the McArdle and Illinois Central cases certainly fits him for an elevated position—either on the bench or—something else.—Cin. Times.

NO PARTY OR NEW PARTY.

The old heads of the Democracy and the dissatisfied and disappointed Republicans, who led the Opposition forces to an inglorious defeat in the late political contest, are far out to sea, without chart or compass, without pilot or rudder, without any common purpose, leadership or principles; without orginization or discipline, nursing only the single idea of opposition to the progressive tendency of the times, in the delusive hope that they may be mistaken for reformers, for the simple reason, that they are not in harmony with the majority of the people, and, that they occassionally assert the privilege quarrelling among themselves.

Just now these gentlemen are discussing, in no amiable temper, the question of "no party, new party" and unadulterated Democracy, The interest which the people, as a whole or even the masses of the Democratic people may have in the decision of this controversy, is not apparent; but the interest of the leading Democratic and so-called independent journals, in the determination of the question, is clearly discernable. If straight Democracy prevails independent journalism will be without followers. If a new party shall be determined upon, the so-called independent journals expect to come to the front, leaving the World and its co-workers without a constituency. If the no-party idea triumphs, then the opposition falls into disorganized fragments each separate clique gathering about its favorite organ, powerless for good in either politics, statesmanship, or morals. So that, after all, this is a mere newspaper quarrel, in which each is striving for the ascendency—for the leadership of the disorganized and purposeless masses delusively claimed by them as followers. Under the naked and insincere cry of reform, these discordant leaders apparently hope for political success. We say insincere for the reason that in Missouri, where the combination accidently triumphed in the late election, it has developed only corruption and incompetency in both the legislative and executive departments of the State goverament, to the dissatisfaction, not to say disgust, of the people of the State.

What is the policy these men and journals desire to develop? On the question of free trade they are divided; on protection of American labor, divided; on postal telegraph, divided; on National and State authority, divided; on internal improvements, divided; on payment of the public debt, divided; on customs and internal taxation, divided; on treatment of Indian tribes, divided; on foreign policy, divided; on opposition to the Republican party, united. What a splendid future such a combination must have! No principles in common, no policy that is satisfactory even to the would-be leaders; no common bond of union, except opposition to all operative measures and all men in authority. And, not even able to assert a common ground of antagonism, or maintain harmony among leaders or followers. The negative merit of these men is next to limitless, the positive yet to be developed.

Such are the elements opposed to, and assuming to arraign the Republican party, question its integrity, and defeat its measures and policy. And why? for no other or better reason than that a few men, no better than themselves, have crept into the Republican ranks, only to be expelled as fast as their sinister purposes are discovered.

Republicans will not turn aside from the great work they have in hand to banter words or phrases with these chronic grumblers, whether of Democratic or Republican antecedents.

The Republican party is patriotic enough, and strong enough, to seek out and punish its own unworthy members, and it will do so without the aid of those who have left its ranks, or continually warred against its progress.

The feeble hold which the dissatisfied Republican and Democratic leaders have of either party, has been so often and so upon the honest and patriotic masses distinctly demonstrated, in the last decade, as to render all danger from any combination they may attempt, simply insignificant.

Mere fault-finding and professions have, long since, ceased to be regarded as evidence of either extraordinary ability or superior patriotism.

The country has learned to look to the positive progressive men of the times for counsel and direction, and in no other existing or proposed organization are these qualities so preeminent and well ordered as in the Republican party, and it is, therefore, to this organization that the people will entrust the guidance of public affairs, while it remains obedient to the dictates of the popular judgment.

OUR WASHINGTON CORRESPONDENCE.

WASHINGTON, May 24, 1873.

The President has decided to sustain Govoner Kellogg in Louisiana against the faction, which, beaten at the poll, attempted by insurrection to render null the voice of the people of the State.

The President's proclamation has been issued commanding insurgents to disperse and retire to their homes within twenty days. This is a step in the right direction. No party should be allowed to disturb the tranquallity of any community by public turmoil. The remedy for a beaten faction lies in the courts of justice; when that fails, either from corruption or from weakness, the question to be decided by the community affected is weather they will submit or resist. Resistance means rebellion, and the followers of McEnery, with the experience of the great slaveholders rebellion before their eyes should have known that they had not sufficient power to withstand the strong arm of the general government when it was invoked for the purpose of sustaining the local government of the State.

One of the greatest causes of the first success of the late rebellion was the prevailing opinion that the doctorine of State rights involved the idea of actual resistance to the general government whenever the rights of a State was invaded, and the statesman of the period were so inoculated with the idea, that Mr. Buchannan, though perceiving clearly enough that nothing else could save the Union, feared to put the doctrine of coercion into effect. The consequences was that a small body of active politicans involved the whole Southern people in the horrors of a rebellion, costing immense amounts of treasure and terrible sacrifice of life and limb. The end at last arrived; the South prostorate, was compeled to accept conditions of existence. These conditions were the equality of all men before the law, and the subordination of all the States to the lawful authority of the general government. The doctrine of coercion was fully estab lished.

The greatest fault, probably, which Governor Kellogg has committed has been in waiting so long before calling upon the President to suppress the opposing faction in his State. We can easily understand his motives, but the public peace is too great a stake to lightly play for,,and Govenor Kellogg's humanity and forbea rance should have long ago given away to the great demands of public peace and tranquillity. The right to petition for the redress of grievances is a sacred thing and must never be overlooked; but on the other hand the old fiat has gone forth: "They that take the sword shall perish by the sword."

He must be a reckless prophet indeed who would at this day venture to make predictions as to the character, the animus or the issues of the approaching political campaign. There are, however, a few leading points that seem to have taken shape, upon which we may safely venture a guess. It seems, for instance, pretty certain that the party divisions will remain pretty much the same as last year. There will be a Republican party and there will be one opposition party. It is a matter of very little moment what name may be adopted by the opposition, but it is quite likely they will, as a general thing, muster under their old name of Democracy. It is scarcely probable that any attempt will be made looking to the formation of a new party. This is to be inferred from the fact that the leading opposition journals discountenance such a movement as ill-advised. There does not seem to be any good reasons for supposing any important change in the drawing of party lines. Those who voted with the Republican party last year seem disposed, as far as can now be ascertained, to do so again. Those who were last year known as Democrats are likely to remain so. There is more of a question, however, as to the probable position of those who, during last fall's campaign, styled themselves Liberal Republicans. It would require a great streach of credulity to enable one to believe that all those dissatisfied Republicans who voted for Mr. Greeley will now go straight into the Democratic camp. That a large number of them will do so is not difficult to believe, but it is quite likely that many will return to their first love. There does not seem to be any disposition among Republicans to deal harshly with their erring brethren, indeed, the spirit of tolerance seems to be a most remarkable trait of Republican character, As an instance of this, we point to the fact that the Ohio Republican State Convention nominated for member of the Board of Public Works the present incumbent, Mr. Philip Herzog, who last year strayed away from the fold and supported Mr. Greeley. This was a very charitable act, and shows that those who went away, following after strange idols, will be permitted to return, and that their temporary backsliding will not be charged up against them.

The Republican party is taking the noblest ground ever occupied by any political organization of our land in refusing to shelter, or excuse, or apologise for the corruptionists who have made their way into its own ranks. He is not true to his country, not even true to his party, who would seek to shield a bad or corrupt man because of party considerations. The Republican party is doing what no other party ever did or ever dared do; it is hunting down, with a hard, relentless hand, those men within its own ranks who have been guilty of dishonorable and corrupt practices. And this course will win. The party that can do this is bound to win the respect, and therefore the support, of honest men everywhere.

It is utterly out of the question for any Democratic convention to surpass the Republican convention at Columbus, Ohio, in its denunciations of Credit Mobilier transactions and back salary laws. Without decending to the throwing of dirt, their language could not well have been more emphatic. It is to sincerely hoped that other conventions of Republicans will follow in the tracks of our Ohio brethren.

So, taking it all in all, the prospects are most encouraging to the Republicans. Local questions will have more than their ordinary influence, but what is lost in one place, from local causes, will be made up in others. This we have every reason to expect from the well known law averages. If there be any good reason why Republicans should not expect, with reasonable effort, to succeed in the campaign the causes for apprehension have not yet transpired.

—A great deal is said about peace commissioners and the barbarity of war, and so much is said about the desirability of a universal Peace Congress to regulate the affairs of nations, that, without looking around to find the actual state of affairs, we might conclude that it was time to close the gates of the Temple of Janus. At the present time, however, internecine war prevails in Spain between the Carlists and the republic, and a terrible civil war prevails in Cuba. War exists between Russia and Khiva, between the Dutch and the sultan of Atcheen, a state of constant and continuous war prevails between the English and the natives of the East Indies, and between the United States and the Indians on our borders, to which must be added the chronic wars of South America, Central America and Mexico, the forcible entry of the civilized nations of the west over the barriers of the old conservative nations of the east, Japan and China. Civilization is a force that moves forward with an irresistible stride, continually meeting with obstacles which it hews out of its way "Peaceably if we can, forcibly if we must," is the motto of progress. That means war for many years to come.

—The Dominion House of Commons has discovered through letters which have been published, that the Premier signed the contract, for the Canadi an Pacific Railroad, for the consideration of three hundred thousand dollars, the contract passing into American hands, the money to be used for the purpose of controlling the elections. The Northern Pacific Railroad company is supposed to be the American party interested. It is proposed to connect the new Canadian line with Chicago in the west and with Sir Hugh Allen's great steamship line at Montreal in the east. In this way the Northern Pacific will secure the conveying trade of the great Northwest, and Sir Hugh Allen will secure for his steamships direct communication with Chicago both by water and by rail. The particulars of this scheme throw our Credit Mobilier into the shade, as the members claim the right to hold contracts on the road while they hold seats as members of Parliament. The road, however, will be a great advantage in developing the agricultural and manufacturing resources of the northwest.

—From all reports the sugar crop promises to be exceedingly large this season. The best information gives the yield for Cuba in 1871 at 196,000 tons; in 1872 at 236,000, and for 1873 the crop is estimated to exceed that of 1872 by 20 per cent. We have other sources, as from the various West India Islands, Brazil, Manila and Java, enough to swell the aggregate to nearly 600,000 tons. Prices ruling are, for inferior sugars from 7 to 8 cents, and for powdered, granulated and crushed sugars from 10 to 12 cents per pound.

—In 1872 we imported 94,312,954 lbs. of foreign wool, valued at $19,571,576,-34, on which government exacted a tax of $9,024,848.75, or a little more than 46 per cent. This looks as if the farmer should raise more wool. The farmer cannot afford to pay to foreign countries nearly twenty millions of dollars for wool when he can raise it himself, nor should the citizens generally be called upon to pay ten millions of dollars taxes upon woolen fabrics. More sheep and more wool are the demands of the times upon the farmers of the country.

—Mr. Philadelphia Van Trump, Democratic member of Congress from the State of Ohio, is reported to have delivered a speech to his constituents on the subject of the back-salary matter and his connection therewith, in which he made use of the following language:

"I could not bring myself to feel it to be consistent either with propriety of duty, at the very close of a term of Congress of two years, by my own vote, to "put money in my purse," against the will of my constituents. There was perhaps no man in the Congress needed money more than I did, but I have not yet come to the conclusion to abandon the consoling idea that there yet remains in this world of ours, bad as it is, something which is still better than money; an approving conscience and a sense of duty honestly performed."

This sounds right, if it does come from a Democrat, but when we learn that the Honorable (?) Philadelphia has actually drawn his little share of the back pay we conclude he might as well have never made that speech.

—Washington is no longer a city of alternate mud and dust, but under the plastic hands of the "Board of Public Works" it has arisen from its dusty bed—escaped its quagmires, and is firmly planted on terra firma. Its principal streets are paved with either asphaltum or block, on which prancing steeds and rolling carriages impress the mind as being the paradise of Jehus. The public grounds with their well selected trees and rich shrubbery, clad in vernal robes, are vocal with the chirp of Russian sparrows, whilst the air is laden with the sweet perfume of floral profuseness and variety. The beauty of its site, as well as its natural surroundings, so handsomely blend with its architectural beauty that the votary of æsthetics is inspired with something of Mahomet's sentiment when he first beheld Damascus; though unlike Mahomet, he refuses not to enter, but hastens to make it his abiding home.

Debts of the World

The following statements of the debts of the world is taken from the Pall Mall Gazette. In view of our own heavy debt, it may be some consolation to know that some nations are bareing debt burdens even heavier than the American Republic. (States owing less than $50,000,000 are not included:)

United States	$2,118,000,000
Great Britian	3,950,000,000

STATE NEWS.

—The Williamsport riots cost the State about $14,000.

—Mauch Chunk is to have a $6,000 soldiers monument.

—An historical society has been organized in Scranton.

—A $75,000 opora house is talked of in Hyde Park, Luzerne county.

—Shamokin brags because she has fourteen men named Thomas Williams.

—Two hundred and forty operators are employed at the Scranton silk factories.

—Over a thousand hotels in the State have closed since the election on the licence question.

—In Rutland township, Tioga county, several new veins of iron ore have been discovered.

—Titusville is much pleased because her gas works have been refitted, and now "works to a charm."

—In Montgomery county, the squirrels and owls were nearly all frozen by the severe weather of the past winter.

—Clearfield county is overrun with civil engineers. They are flitting to and fro, seemingly full of business in all quarters.

—A blackbird entered the auditorium of a church in Chambersburg, last Sunday, which so disturbed the congregation that the pastor adjourned.

—On Thursday morning Paul Michael was instantly killed at Kutztown, Berks county, while cleaning a cesspool, a heavy outhouse falling on him.

—The Hamburg Iron company has appointed Mr. Moorehead of Philadelphia, and Mr, Schoener, of Schuylkill county, to close up their business.

—A man with a big heart lives in Allentown, Pa. He found a child's pocket-book, containing five cents, in the street the other day, and advertised it.

—An old lady died in Kennett Square, Chester county, lately, and after her demise a will was found which she had written upon a slate. Its legality is to be tested.

—The arbitrators in the case of John A. Shober, of Lancaster, who was forcibly ejected from a passenger car on the Pennsylvania railroad, in January, awarded him $500 last Friday.

—A number of outside capitalists are looking about Bellefonte, with a view to finding sites for manufacturing establishments. Two paper mills are spoken of as likely to be started.—State Journal.

—The Johnstown Tribune states that the united ages of the six pall-bearers in attendance at the funeral of Mr. Sanderson in that place, on last Satutday, amounted to four hundred and sixteen years.

—A young boy about eight years of age, named Lally, living at Port Clinton, Schuylkill county, fell down the mountain near that place, on Saturday, while gathering wild flowers, and was instantly killed.

—The Pennsylvania Railroad tunnel at Grubb's furnace, Lancaster county, is to be enlarged, its present capacity being insufficient to admit of the safe passage of the enlarged passenger cars introduced on the railroad.

—Colonel Alfred Day, naval agent a the port of Philadelphia under President Pierce's administration, a soldier of the Mexican war, and who commanded a regiment of "emergency men" at the time of the invasion of the State by General Lee, died in Philadelphia on the 18th inst.

—Michael Kettrick, of Summit hill, Carbon county, lost his life under the following circumstances the other day: He had been directed to enter the slope to do some carpenter work, and in stepping across the wire rope used for drawing out cars, he fell and sought to recover himself by grasping the rope, which dragged him into the sheath, mangling him terribly.

—A singular wreck occurred near Conshohocken, on the Reading railroad, last week. A heavy rope with hook attached fell from the tender of a freight train, one end of which was secured to the tender. As the rope and hook dragged along the track the hook caught in a switch and turned it, thus causing the engine and tender to run into a coal train and wrecked several of the cars.

Poetry.

A MOUNTAIN PASTORAL.

A couple at a cottage door,
Under the maple trees;
A mountain landscape stretched before,
Behind, beside: and nothing more
The passing traveler sees.

And is there more? The man and maid
Who caught your idle glance
Love's pretty hide-and-seek have played
Before they stood there in the shade,
Reading their own romance.

And he is young, and true, and strong,
And she is young and wise,
All hopes that to fresh hearts belong
Around their humble doorstone throng;
What more had Paradise?

Green are their waiting fields of toil,
With wild flowers blossoming sweet,
The living wealth no thief can spoil,
The boundless treasures of the soil,
Lie poured out at their feet.

Their neighbors? Not far off are they,
Beyond the bright home hill—
White Face, and Passaconaway,
And old Chocorua, rising gray,
Dreamy, remote, and still.

The future opens fair and wide
Within the young man's eyes;
The mountains bless the sweet girl bride;
Life is a dreamland glorified,
What more was Paradise.

Our Story Teller.

GRANDPAPA'S STORY.

A THANKSGIVING EPISODE.

They had just risen from dinner in the old house at Eastwood. Dinna and Sallie were carrying out the remnants of the feast. With regretful eyes the children watched its disappearance. They had tried all the traditionary rules, had "stood up," "jumped three jumps," "walked four times around the table," and positively not another mouthful could they swallow. And yet there was something sad in letting those 'bonnes bouches'—those delightful halves, and quarters, and triangles of mince, and apple and pumpkin—disappear and be lost forever. The Thanksgiving Dinner for that year had become a part of the past, and I can tell you Grandmamma Allen's pie-crust was not a thing of every day.

From the great turkey stuffed with oysters, which inaugurated the meal, to the tartlets of ruby cranherry, which brought it to a close, everything had that dainty, savory perfection of flavor which appertained to those fast-vanishing days of wide-mouthed fire-places, heaped with crackling logs, and "bake-ovens" whose depths entombed whole regiments of loaves and pastries, and returned them in the fullness of time, brown, delicate and perfect—a fragrant resurrection. Alas! the aroma of those old-fashioned viands is almost a traditionary thing to these days of "modern improvements." Here and there it lingers in the far recesses of New England and at Grandma Allen's it would linger always. No range disfigured her kitchen. A "waterback" was a thing unknown. The simple fire-place wore its ancient livery of cranes, pot-hooks and roasting-jacks; and over all, King Hickory, jolliest of monarchs, presided royally. Under his sway what unimaginable cakes came to perfection! What flavorous roasts! what tempting baked beans! what toothsome hoe-cakes! what Indian puddings! I forbear. That was indeed the Golden Age of cookery.

Four generations were represented in the circle that now drew around the cheerful blaze in the "keeping room"—from Grandpa, with his silvery head, to Baby May, fast asleep in the arms of her fair young mother, his eldest grandchild. There were the five sons and daughters, with their respective wives and husbands, and their twenty-four children, to say nothing of Baby May ond her proud young father, or little Nell on Grandpa's knee—the orphan child of that youngest son whose loss was the one heavy shadow on this happy home. But to-night no shadow was visible. The flickering firelight fell only upon faces ot their brightest, whether in the bloom of childhood or the comely serenity of middle life; on bright eyes and lips, on kindly smiles and looks. All shone with the cheerful humor of the anniversary. The children brimful of fun and turkey; the parents renewing their childhood for an evening. And there, in the shadow of the curtains, whither Harry and Edith had betaken themselves, a little drama was going on—a fantasia, born of the season—which, if a guess might be hazarded, would ripen, amidst other anniversaries, into the earnest purpose of a lifetime.

"Dranpa, tell us a tory," demanded one of the little ones as night drew on.

"Good for you, Tot!" exclaimed her brother.

"Oh yes, grandpapa! Grandpa tells such nice stories!" chorused the others; while little Nell, putting her soft hand to the wrinkled cheek, joined in with the "please" which she so often had found irresistible.

Now this "story" of Grandpa's was one of the features of the Eastwood Thanksgiving. It used to be "Cinderella" and "Jack the Giant Killer," formerly, when the little people were still less, and nowadays it was a stirring tale to please the boys, or some German legend adapted to the occasion. Last year it was the adventures of a drummer boy and his dog at Antietam. And now, as grandpa settled Nell in a more comfortable position on his lap, and gave a preparatory "Hem!" the whole party, young and old, clustered a little nearer, and prepared to be attentive.

There was a sly twinkle in grandpa's eyes as he began:

"This time, children, I am going to tell you a love story."

"Dear me!" said the aunties to each other; while Hal in the window, possessing himself of the pretty Edith's hand, gave it a pressure which brought a bright blush to her fair young cheeks.

"Yes, a love story. Once upon a time—say a hundred years ago, or thereabouts—there was a young man whose name was Tom, and he lived in New York. He was rather a lonely young man, for he had no home and had lodgings which were not very nice; but he minded tt less because he had never known what a home was; and besides he was very busy all the time."

"What was he busy at?" shouted Jack, who was famous for asking questions.

"He was a clerk in a great wholesale warehouse."

"What did they sell?"

"Now, Jack, you musn't keep interrupting," cried the other children.

"They sold machinery, Jack, and farmers' tools—plows ann harrows and such like—and all sorts of inventions and patents; what are known nowadays as Yankee notions."

"Why that's just like Clark & Ambler'" cried Jack; but somebody hushed him up. Grandpa only laughed. Clark & Ambler were the successors of the house in which all his money had been made.

"As I said before he was very busy; for though business was on a smaller scale then than now, this was one of the largest houses in that line, and there was a great deal to do; and by working hard he had laid up some money, and, what was better, earned the good will and confidence of his employers. There was some talk of his becoming a junior partner in a year or two; and altogether he fe lt that the world was going smoothly with him.

"He hadn't many relations,this young man. His parents were dead, and he had no aunts nor uncles. There was a first cousin of his father's living in New England; but he had never seen him or any of his family. But just at this time his two daughters came to town to make a visit to a friend.

"What were their names, grandpapa?" asked little Nell, in her soft voice.

"Well, pet, we'll name one of them Edith and the other Ellen. They always called each other 'Dittie' and 'Nellie.' Edith was the prettiest. She had long light hair and blue eyes and a fair skin, and altogether was just about the sort of girl young fellows picture themselves falling in love with some day. And, I assure you, the young fellow I'm telling you about did so the very first time he saw her."

"And was Nellie pretty too?" asked the Nellie on grandpapa's knee.

"Well," continued grandpa, in a considerable tone, "not exactly. She had brown hair and eyes, and a trim little figure, and looked altogether good and honest and sweet. Still, I guess most young men would have given her sister ten glances where they gave her one. At all events my young man did: for he looked at Dittie all the time, and hardly saw Nellie at all.

"There were not many places of amusement in those days, but such as they were, they seemed very brilliant to these country girls, who had never been in the city before. And you rarely see a cousin so polite as Cousin Tom—so ready to devote all his spare time to taking them to this place and that place, and hunting up shows and entertainments for them. They wrote home to their father how kind he had been; their letters were full of him; and in return 'papa' wrote and sent his regards, and Cousin Tom must surely come and spend his Thanksgiving with him in New Hampshire. You may be sure Cousin Tom was ready enough to accept the invitation, for he had never seen girls so pretty or so nice before; and by this time had quite made up his mind to fall in love with his cousin Edith.

"It was all arranged. The young ladies went home late in October, and the day before Thanksgiving, if nothing prevented, Tom was to present himself at ———, the place they lived at in New-Hampshire.

"What place was it, grandpa?" persisted Jack.

"Suppose we call it Westfield," replied grandpa, with a twinkle. "As it happened, this young clerk's employer had some business to be transacted in the town of Elgin—only twelve miles from Westfield—and as Tom was going so near, he decided to entrust it with him, only, unluckily happened, this business must be attended to the Monday before Thanksgiving.

"But never mind that," said the head of the firm. "I'll give you a fortnight's leave, and you had better be off next Thursday: that will bring you to Elgin on Saturday night. You can do the business Monday, and be free to go to your friends by Monday evening. Then you need not report yourself here till next Thursday week. How will that answer?"

"It answered wonderfully well, except for one little thing, and that was, Tom did not like the idea of presenting himself at a stranger's house two days before he was expected. However, there was no time to write. Mails travelled rarely to that part of the country. "There'll be a tavern or something," Tom said to himself. "I'll go there and see how the land lies before I make my appearance."

"So in the best of spirits he started for his forty-eight hours of staging. Ah, boys, you may talk as much as you like about the advantages of steam, but there was never anything equal to those old fashioned stage rides when, as in Tom's case, it was the height of Indian summer and the country all gold and misty, and the air soft and balmy, with just the little twang of last night's frost in it to give it zest. Four good horses and a seat on top! Phew! you'll never see anything like it. Well, Tom had a grand time, got to Elgin safely, did his business Monday morning, and the same afternoon, just as the sun was setting, rolled into Westfield in a farmer's wagon which he had hired to bring him over.

"The wagon set him down in front of a blacksmith's shop, and drove off leaving him to shift for himself. Of course the first thing that he asked for was the inn; but there was none, it appeared. He felt at a loss what to do, and seeing just then a pleasant-looking elderly man jogging past in a substantial gig, he concluded to stop him and make some inquiries.

"Can you tell me, sir, if there is any place in this village where I can get a night's lodging?"

"The stranger took a look at him, and answered, yankee fashion, with another question.

"'You are a traveller, then?'

"'Yes. I've come up from Mew York to spend a few deys, and I find you've no tavern here.'

"'New York, eh? You don't happen to know a cousin of mine named Tom Somers, do you?'

"'That is my name, sir.'

"'Ah!' said the old gentleman, with a laugh. 'I thought I couldn't be mistaken in your nose. It's as good as a family label all the world round. But what on earth do you want to find a tavern for?'

"Tom explained.

"'Nonsense," said his cousin. 'Jump right in. You can't come too soon. The girls will be glad to see you. They couldn't say enough about you when they came home'

"'If you are sure I can't put you to any inconvenience.'

"'Inconvenience! not a bit. Jump right in. We are country folks and don't put ourselves out for our friends. You must take us as you find us. Dittie was deep in some furhelow or other when I came off, but Nellie will see to you. Bless her little heart, she's never too busy to do anything that's wanted, if it only makes somebody else comfortable.

"So off they drove, and after half a mile, turned in at an open gate, and stopped in front of a large, low, comfortable homestead. The old gentleman sprang out like a boy, and opening the door began to call out in a loud voice, 'Dittie—Nellie—girls!'

"'This way, Tom. Here's the keeping room, and there's a fire—or ought to be. Well, Dittie, what's the matter? Why don't you come and speak to your cousin Tom?'

"And Tom stood and stared, for the figure before him was very little like the exquisite fairy he had been dreaming about for a month back. Dittie was cuddled up in a corner of the hearth with a candle beside her, and her lap full of a blue silk petticoat upon which she was sewing. Her pretty hair was all tucked out of the way, and looked rough and careless. Her dress was a sort of faded bed-gown, evidently put on in a hurry, and as she got up and shuffled unwillingly forward there could be no doubt that her slippers were down at the heel.

"Now, children, if there is one thing above another a woman cannot afford to be, it is untidy. No matter how beautiful she is, it spoils all. Venus herself couldn't make an impression in a bed gown with her hair rumpled and her collar awry."

And as Tom stared at his lady-love—sullen and mortified, and in this uncompromising guise—he felt his sentiment for her oozing out at the tips of his fingers, and what's worse, it never came back again. Remember that, my girls.

"'We didn't expect you so soon,' was all Dittie could find to say in the confusion of the moment.

"'But we're very glad, cousin Tom,' joined in another voice, and then he became conscious for the first time that Nelly had entered. She carried a candle in each hand, and when she had set them down and given Tom a welcome, and found a chair for him and her father, she moved about the room, giving bright little housewifely touches here and there—poking the fire to a blaze and making things look neat and cheerful. Her dress was only a common print, but it was fresh and spotless; her hair was glossy as satin, and the neat little collar and bow of ribbon made the simple garb as becoming as a richer material. All the time she was arranging the room she went on talking in a pleasant voice, asking questions about the journey, and diffusing that atmosphere of home and welcome which is so acceptable to a stranger.

'Dittie slipped away, but Tom forgot to miss her, he was so well entertained. By and by she came back in a smart gown with her hair curled; but somehow Tom couldn't think her as pretty as he used to. The vision of the shabby dressing gown and rough locks was too recent to be forgotten.

"Well, a supper appeared, and a first-rate supper it was. Tom was glad to see it, for the journey had made him very hungry. Nelly poured the tea. It appeared she was house-keeper; and as she sat there looking sweet enough to sweeten the cups without sugar. Tom saw for the first time what a dear little face she had, and how honest and true her brown eyes were. Her teeth, too, were like pearls—she showed them when she laughed, and that was pretty often, for Dittie seemed sulky and silent, and she was anxious to make up for it and have cousin Tom feel at home.

"Next morning Dittie looked subdued and abstracted, with none of the lively ways she had worn in New York. Tom found afterward that her head was full of the blue silk gown which she had set her heart on finishing for Thanksgiving.

"Soon after breakfast she went away to sew upon it, leaving Tom in Nelly's hands, which was inconvenient; for Nelly had all sorts of things to do that day—apples to pare and pumpkins to stew, and pies to bake and I don't know what all.

However, there was no help for it. She made a bright fire in the keeping-room and brought some books for Tom, and told him that she must leave him awhile, and if he got lonely he must come out in the kitchen, for there she must be. And of course Tom had no idea of sitting alone; so he soon came wandering after her, and spent almost the whole day there, helping and hindering, for, though he pared some apples and beat a great many eggs, I'm afraid his long legs and his conversation were a good deal in the way.

"However, Nelly didn't let him know it if they were. And it was so pleasant to watch her at work that he would have been sorry enough to have been ordered off. She was the quickest, most skilful little creature in all her ways, and yet so orderly and systematic. Whether whisking some dainty mixture with a big spoon, or wielding the rolling pin, or touching the oven door with a white knuckle to see if the heat was right, all she did seemed graceful and charming. Ah, I can tell you, children, a girl never looks half so well as when she is doing plain, useful work in the nicest and prettiest way. And when those pies came out of the oven," said grandpa, smacking his lips, "you never saw the like. They resembled snow-flakes fried to a rich brown, only they were a great deal better."

"Not better than grandma's," broke in a chorus of indignant voices.

"Well," said grandpa, looking wickedly about, "grandma's pies, as it happens, are the only ones I ever saw which were exactly like Nelly's, and just as good."

The dear old lady blushed like a girl.

"Now, Thomas," she said, "you mustnt talk such nonsense to the children."

"Oh," shrieked Jack, the irrepressible; "grandpapa's name is Thomas, ain't it? I guess—" But here somebody choked him off, and grandpapa went on, very fast.

"So all the pies were baked, and the loaves of bread, and the Thanksgiving cake, and the plum-pudding mixed and put over to 'half boil,' for it was a great business in those days to get puddings boiled, and by that time supper time was nearly come. Dittie came down very good-natured and talkative. She had finished her dress and quite recovered her temper; and Nelly, who was tired, looked a little pale, and sat quietly most of the evening.

"But there was no danger of cousin Tom's making any further mistakes. Twenty-four hours had done the work of a month, and he had made up his mind, once for all, that the pale, weary face in the corner was the sweetest face in the world.

"Wednesday was almost as busy as Tuesday. There were the last touches to be given to the cooking, and the house to be brightened up, and the red apples to wipe and arrange with autumn leaves. Cousin Tom helped in everything; and when the afternoon came, and he found that a great many of the pies were to be carried about the neighborhood as gifts to poor people, who depended upon this yearly remembrance, he insisted on going along to carry the basket and hold the umbrella, for it was snowing a little. I need not inform you that Nelly was the pie distributor. All the work—or most all—of the house fell upon her. Dittie found an excuse for avoiding everything that was troublesome or inconvenient, and on this occasion she wanted to baste some lace on the blue dress.

Well, they had a splendid walk, I won't pretend to tell you all they talked about; but they came home very rosy and good-humored and hungry for supper.

"Neither will I venture to describe the Thanksgiving dinner, or the good minister's sermon in the morning. There were not so many people to eat the dinner, and the sermon had seventeen heads to it; otherwise both of them were very much like those we have enjoyed to day. Dittie wore the blue silk, and looked lovely in it—as was only fair when it had cost her so much trouble. But to Tom's mind little Nelly, in her gray gown and scarlet ribbon, looked, when compared to her sister, like some gentle home bird by the side of a gay tropic songster, a thing to love and cherish and woo to live in your heart forever. So he felt that day—God bless her!—and so he feels now—and always will feel as long as he feels anything."

There was a little tremble in grandpas voice as he concluded, and he blew his nose rather loudly.

"And did they get married?" asked little Nelly on his knee.

"To be sure, my pet. What would be the use of a love-story that ended in any other way. They were married after a while and lived in New York a great many years, and then, the old house at Westfield being left vacant, and sister Dittie gone to a home of her own, they bought it and went to live there. And they added to it and added to it, that their boys and girls might have room to be comfortable. And they are old people now, and live there still; and every year the sons and daughters, with their boys and girls, come back and keep Thanksgiving in the old home with the old folks. And that's the end of my story.'

The aunts and uncles smiled at one another, and in excited chorus called out, "Grandpa, grandpa, tell us, ain't you cousin Tom?"

Grandpapa only laughed. "I am afraid Nelly will scold if I tell," he said.

Little Nelly, grandmama's namesake, looked up, with wonder in her blue eyes; but the older ones with the savory remembrance of grandma's tarts fresh in their minds; raised an enthusiastic cheer and precipitated themselves upon her in a body, kissing the soft old hands and the withered face wherever an opening could be found.

"How pretty grandmama must have been when she was young," whispered Edith to Hal.

"H-u-m," answered Harry, diplomatically; "yes. Grandpa was a lucky man to secure good looks and good pie crust all at once—wa sn't he, Dittie?"

And Edith, grandma's pupil, whose genius for domestic affairs had made her rather famous among the cousinhood, blushed her prettiest.

"And now," said grandpapa, "come away children. My old wife has been smothered as long as is proper, I think. It is time for Blindman's Buff."

WONDERFUL ESCAPES.

"For He shall give His angels charge over thee, to keep thee in all thy ways. They shall bear thee up in their hands, lest thou dash thy foot against a stone.—Psalm xci."

On a sunny evening in May, 1867, a small party were standing on the top of the waterfall looking down on Virginia Water. The footing of one of them suddenly gave way, and he fell head-foremost, turning over and over in the descent. It was Arthur W——. Whether in the confidence and carelessness of youth he had been guilty of want of caution, and slipped; or whether the unstable earth on the edge crumbled away and sent him down without fault of his own, remains a question yet. He went down; turning over, as it seemed, from ledge to ledge of rock, and shot into the water below.

Those left on the brink felt paralyzed. To give him help was impossible; and belived that the fall—the striking of his head against the rocks—must have killed him, or, at least, stunned him. There was a minute's dreadful pause. The towering trees reared their branches on either side; the nightengales were singing their evening song; the water went playing and dashing over the rocks, sending its sparkling spray around. But that one life in danger below—was it of this world yet, or of the next?

A faint noise, as of swimming, ascended to their ears, and they saw Arthur W——striking out, battling with the troubled water. He was alive still, then; and he could swim; both of which facts had been questions of suspense. Encumbered with his clothes, his hat on, still he swam, bearing away across the water. They held their breaths as they watched him. Was it a fictitious strength—this that was carrying him on a strength that would fail ere the goal was reached? After that strange fall, the fear was only a reasonable one. No. He struck on bravely, never pausing or flagging, and landed safely on the other side of the water.

Taking off his hat—which, singular to say, had remained on his head—he waved it aloft to those watching him.

"I'm all right!"

All right? There was neither bone broken nor flesh bruised. There was not so much as a scratch.

He shook the water away from him, talking lightly, laughing gaily with those who, their fears subsided, now ran anxiously up, with their eager questions.

"But it is not possible that you have come out wholly scatheless! There must be some damage."

"I feel none."

"What an extraordinary thing! Such an escape was never hearh of."

Getting some brandy and water, Arthur W——walked away to where he was staying; an hour's walk. There he took off his wet things and got into bed between the blankets. They brought him something hot, and he dropped asleep, peacefully as though he had lain down in the ordinary course of events, after a busy day.

Later in the summer, I went to see the spot where Arthur W——fell. There was scarcely any water left, and the rocks were bare. Friends with me, who are accustomed to the place, said they had never seen it so dry. The torrent, rushing down in a general way, was changed into a murmuring ripple now; a trickling, gentle stream. But this dryness enabled us to see the rocks, over which he fell. They are in tiers, receding one above another; and, as we stood and gazed, the mental query arose to all—how was it possible for him to have escaped with life?

Standing at the foot and looking upwards; standing on the height and looking downwards, the feeling of astonishment only increased. It was truly marvellous. The witness to his fall described it exactly as related above: he turned over and over and they had thought that each time his head came in contact with those pitiless rocks, partially hidden then. Looking again now, it was beyond the power of man to conceive how his head had escaped them. But that the age of miracles is past, we should have said that one was wrought then. Any way, the preservation could only have come direct from God.

If the famous and remarkable dream of Dr. Doddridge had never before been brought home to my mind, it certainly was then, as we stood there: and with startling force. Those who may be familiar with it will forgive me if I here go over some few of its features, for the sake of such as are not. Surely, in the face of these unaccountable escapes, so far as human action is concerned, the dream bears a strange significance.

The dream visited Dr. Doddridge after na evening spent with Dr. Samuel Clark. Their converse had turned on the question of the flight of the soul immediately after death: whether, or not, it rises at once to the presence of its Creator, and to the glorious things of Heaven—which eye here hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither hath it entered into the heart of man to conceive.

Dr. Doddridge dreampth that he was ill, and died. We are apt to associate death with everything that is sad and gloomy: in the dream it appeared to be the exact contrary. He seemed to have thrown off pain and care, all the ills of this mortal life, and to be soaring away on wines of joy ineffable, lightly floating in an atmosphere of brightness, his form change to the seraphic beauty of an angel. In short, he had put on immortality. But, just as though he had been present still in the body, he was a witness to what was passing in the world below. He saw himself lying dead in his chamber, and his friends weeping around. Prehaps he longed to whisper to then of comfort—to tell them, that in place of that cast-off shell he had gained a glorious garment of renewed life. Ah, my friends! if such messages could but be brought from the emancipated soul when we gather weeping around our dead!

He rose onward and upward, illuminated by the shining flood of golden light. Not alone. With him, guiding and supporting him as he traversed those regions of illimitable space, was one of Heaven's messengers; an angel; whose aspect was full of gravity and sweetness. Presently the outline of a mansion appeared in view; a glittering golden palace of grand beauty; never during life could he have imagined such. Not Heaven, however, even this—as it seemed to him. And he thought he questioned the guiding messenger; who intimated that it was to be his home for the present; his resting place.

They entered into a vast room of the mansion, in the midst was laid out a table prepared for the Holy Sacrament; some grapes and a golden cup were on its fair white linen covering. The guide then left him. "Rest here" he said, "the lord of the mansion will come to you; meanwhile study the walls." And Dr. Doddridge was left alone.

He turned to the walls of the room. They were hung with a series of pictures; and he saw to his unspeakable wonder, that his own past life and its events were represented there. From his earliest infancy to his recent death, the whole course and circumstances of his career, day by day, week by week, month by month and year by year, were there depicted. Every event that occurred to him he read on the walls. Some incidents he remembered perfectly; others that had faded into oblivion with the effacing hand of time, were recalled to his memory with unerring fidelity by these vivid piatures. Things doubtful in life, which had brought to him a sort of blind wonder of perplexity, were read easily now. Above all, the danger of his life were there from which he had escaped unharmed, or but slightly hurt.

Every peril he had surmounted and known of; many that he had not known at all, or but barely glanced at; all were traced there. On this canvas near to him, was one that had always remained on his memory as a great escape; a fall from his horse, and a wondrous rescue from imminent danger. And he saw now the source of the escapes—as the dream showed it to him.

Attendant upon every scene throughout his whole career, all the pictures on the walls being dotted with them, were angels. Shielding, loving, guiding angels; who had been in close companionship with him during life; never quitting him; watching over him and guarding him from harm by night and by day In that well-remembered accident, the fall from his horse, he saw that an angel had stretched forth his hands to receive him, and so had broken the force of the fall. The more he gazed on those wonderful pictures of record, the greater grew his awe and reverence, his admiration for the unbounded loving-kindness of God. Every place his eye turned upon was conspicuous for some special act of mercy shown to him—of which prehaps he had been utterly heedless.

As he thus gazed, the door was thrown open, and ONE entered. One of radiant mein, of all perfect beauty; and Dr. Doddridge sank on the ground, overpowered by the awe of his majesty. It was the Lord of the Mansion; the Savior, Christ; and that kind, ever-loving saviour stooped and raised him, gently telling him not to fear, as he led him to the Communion-table. Pressing the juice of the grapes into the golden chalice, He drank Himself, and held it to him whom He had redeemed, speaking "This is the new wine in my father's kingdom."

Dr. Doddridge drank, and it seemed that with the act he assumed a seraphic nature. Perfect love had cast out fear; he rejoiced in his redemption; he conversed with his Redeemer as a dear friend. Then there fell on his ears these glad tidings:

"Thy labors are over, thy work is approved, great and glorious is thy reward."

After that, Heaven and its glories began to open to him; one glory after another bursting upon his entranced sight. it was too much. In spite of the dream Dr. Doddridge had not yet put on immortality, and he awoke—awoke in tears of awe and rapture. Never after that did he ascribes these marvelous escapes from danger—that every day arise to astonish the world—to aught but God's invisible messengers of mercy.

Is it wrong to believe that the dream vouchsafed to this good man—who certainly strove to "walk with God"—was a type of reality, so far as regards these attendant angels? If wrong, it is very beautiful. Is it a mistake to suppose that these "ministering spirits" broke Arthur W———'s fall, and delivered him from danger? Looking at it in a material point of view, I see not how else his escape was to be accounted for. Were this intended for a theological paper-many passages from the Scriptures, the Psalms of David and others, might be quoted in support of the theory.

And, in the doubt, let us cherish it. Let us tell it to our children in their early years, and impress it upon them as one of the earnests of God's love.

A crowd of angels, tender messengers from the Most High about their path continually, never absent by night or by day, guiding, blessing, shielding them on their pilgrimage to that later life, where they will put on immortality.

THE GREAT SOUTH AMERICAN

JURUBEBA

BLOOD PURIFIER

Is the most powerful cleanser, strengthener and remover of Glandular Obstructions known to Materia Medica.

It is specially adapted to constitutions "worn down" and debilitated by the warm weather of Spring and Summer, when the blood is not in active circulation, consequently gathering impurities from sluggishness and imperfect action of the secretive organs, and is manifested by Tumors, Eruptions, Blotches, Boils, Pustules, Scrofula, &c., &c.

When weary and languid from overwork, and dullness, drowsiness and inertia take place of energy and vigor the system needs a Tonic to build it up and help the Vital Forces to regain their recuperative power.

In the heat of Summer, frequently the Liver and Spleen do not properly perform their functions; the Uterine and Urinary Organs are inactive, producing weakness of the stomach and intestines and a predisposition to billious derangement.

DR. WELLS' EXTRACT OF JURUBEBA

Is prepared directly from the SOUTH AMERICAN PLANT, and is peculiarly suited to all these difficulties; it will cleanse the VITIATED BLOOD, strengthening the LIFE-GIVING POWERS, and REMOVE ALL OBSTRUCTIONS from IMPAIRED AND ENFEEBLED ORGANS.

It should be freely taken, as Jerubeba is pronounced by medical writers the most efficient PURIFIER, TONIC and DEOBSTRUENT known in the whole range of medicinal plants.

Bellefonte, Pa

THE Philadelphia Age states that the Democracy are about amending the rules governing the party in that city. A prominent amendment might be "No more corruption, no more bribery, no more pickings and stealings."

This would apply admirably also to Centre County. We hear it rumored that the County Commisioners propose to tax all property to its full valuation. What occasion there is for this we cannot see. The people of Centre County are sufficiently burdened now with taxation under the present incorrupt and incorruptable admininstration (?) Doubtless they begin to realize that their hold upon the credulity of their constituents is lossening, that they have imposed upon the people of Centre County with their exhorbitant printing bills, ring jobs and every conceivable scheme for fleecing the people until further endurance is well nigh impossible, and they will make this extra taxation to give them the better chance to grab while the opportunity lasts. We are informed that these worthies have decided to curtail their expense by giving the county printing only to the Watchman and Brichter—the Watchman gets a loaf and the Berichter a crumb. This sounds very well but their subsequent deliberations do not look like curtailing. Because the REPUBLICAN and Centre Hall Reporter,—one of their own party organs—had the honesty and courage to protest against the squandering of the public money by the publication at 20 cts per line of three columns of registration act at the last election, of interest to no one and not required by law, and several other similar outrages, they are to be cut off henceforth and forever from county patronage while we are cursed with a Democratic administration, and negotiations for printing in future being narrowed down to the Watchmen and Commissioners these little speculations will be more easily controled by this loud mouthed howler for political reform.

LOUISIANA MUDDLE.

And at last the strong arm of the government has been interposed in order to restore peace in Louisiana and protect her citizens. President Grant has issued his proclamation, dated May 22, commanding the disturbers of the peace, the rioters and banditti of Louisiana to disperse and retire to their homes and engage in more tranquil avocations within twenty days, else something more severe will be administered. McEneryism and Ku Kluxism have come to grief at last.

It is high time that the government should adopt active measures to stay the hand of violence, murder and rapine that has been recklessly and lawlessly engaged in for months, rendering life and property unsafe. After the courts properly adjudicated the election of Kellogg, and McEnery and his disappointed and disaffected rebellious hordes continued to defy the law, engage in various massacres, such as that at Colfax, and intimidate and overpower the civil authorities of the State, the government ought, without further delay or hesitancy to have asserted its sovereign power to protect her citizens wherever found on United States soil, and squelched the turbulent spirits at once, before so many human lives were sacrificed, and a reproach brought on our government.

Wherever a rebellious organization assumes proportions of so gigantic a character as to commit bloodshed by the massacre of scores of human beings, and destroy property regardless and in defiance of law, and the powers that be, in the State, are impotent to protect life and property, then helpless and most pitiable the condition of the innocent citizen, if the sovereign power of his country can't extend to him any protection.

Under such circumstances there should be no doubt, nor question, nor delay on the part of the government as to its right or its exercise of duty in extending the necessary protection.

But, as the government has taken action in the matter, we hope for a speedy termination of the Kilkenny fight, and that peace, good order and prosperity wil be restored to Louisiana, and that she will struggle into the line of progress and development,

It is about time that our erring brethren of the South should know that the rebellion and its causes were absolutely a failure, and that their phantom idea of the "lost cause" being restored must vanish and can never become a reality.

EVERY country newspaper editor should attend the meeting of the Pennsylvania Editorial Association this summer, as it is important that there should be an earnest and full discussion of the infamous law of Congress which prohibits the free exchange.

That the law taking away the franking privilege, passed by the last Congress, is a wise one in some respects we concede, and that it is unwise in some respects we are compelled to admit.—That portion of it which places an embargo on the free exchange of the press is not only unwise, but, to a degree, oppressive, and instead of being a law that tends to further progress, civilization, and disseminate general intelligence, it tends rather to retard and work a revolution backwards.

The press is the educator of the day. It makes and controls public sentiment, and is the great agency that educates and informs the masses. Then, if the education of the masses be essential to their good citizenship and the stability of our government, and its progress and advancement to a higher state of perfection be in anywise dependent upon good citizenship, surely any legislation that tends to retard and obstruct the growth of the general intelligence of our citizens by limiting their opportunities for obtaining information, is unwise and ought to be repealed. Especially is such the case when these facilities can be extended without susceptibility of abuse.

A majority of the people in the rural districts deem themselves, and are unable to take a daily paper and their county paper too. And if they were all able to take a daily paper, they don't have mail facilities for receiving the same.—So they depend upon their county paper for a resume of the daily news and passing events, and the county paper is dependent for them upon the daily and city press, and this law prohibiting a free exchange will, to a very considerable extent, cut off the supply. The law, so far as it prohibits free exchange, then, ought to be repealed. Congress should be most forcibly memorialized through the press to repeal the same, and no more fit time for a unanimity of action, and expression of sentiment relative to the matter, could be had than at the coming meeting of the Editorial Association.

WILL OF THE CHIEF JUSTICE.—The will of the late Chief Justice of the United States, disposing of a quarter of a million of property, is a model of brevity in its way. Usually a document of this character would be swelled out to a length out of which dissatisfied parties and the legal gentlemen would be pretty sure to pick a flaw and a lawsuit. Judge Chase's will is dated on the 19th of November, 1870, and is as follows:

"I nominate H. D. Cooke, of the District of Columbia, to be the sole executor of this my last will and testament. After the payment of all just debts, I make the following bequests: The interest on six thousand dollars at seven per cent. to my niece, Jane Auld, during her life, and if her daughters survive, the principal thereof to be paid to them equally. Ten thousand dollars to Wilberforce University. Ten thousand dollars to Dartmouth College. Whatever sum may be due to me by my late brother, Edward J. Chase, of Lockport, New York, to be remitted to his widow and administratrix. The picture of Chief Justice Marshall, presented by members of the bar and other citizens of New York, to the United States, for the use of the Supreme Court. The residue of my estate to be distributed in equal parts to my two daughters. I commit my soul to God, in Christ Jesus our Saviour through the Holy Spirit.

(Signed) S. P. CHASE."

——The Sunbury Daily has been enlarged to dimensions much more respectable than heretofore. It looks as though it intended to be a success, and we hope it will.

Ex-Commissioner Van Buren's Case—Justice Promised.

A very strong deputation of citizens of New Jersey, consisting of Hon. John Hill, W. W. R. Vermillye, Daniel Drake Smith, Hon. John Davidson, W. J. Wyman Jones, Robt. Bennitz Jordan, and E. A. Walton, waited on the President Wednesday to express their unabated confidence, and that of their fellow-citizens, in the high personal honor and integrity of Gen. Van Buren the United States Commissioner at Vienna. They had a very satisfactory interview with the President, who received them with great courtesy, and assured them of the desire and intention of the government to do full justice to General Van Buren, when all the facts connected with the Commission shall be received. Nothing could be more just and honorable than the sentiments expressed by the President to show that if injustice was done to any citizen, that action would be taken as soon as the Government was in possession of the necessary information now daily expected from Vienna. He was understood to say, that although he has been absent for a short time there were no specific charges on file in the State Department, and that Mr. Fish had called upon him in person to deny the correctness of the report which had recently been published in reference to the State Department having any affidavit in connection with the story, in which the name of Mr. Sutherland, a restaurant keeper, had been mentioned.

INCENDIARISM.—The National Board of Fire Underwriters at their late meeting in the city of New York, resolved to raise a fund of $100,000 for the detection and punishment of parties in the nefarious business of incendiarism and arson. The Executive Committee of that Board at their meeting on the 14th inst. carried out the resolution and opened the subscription.

We hail this movement as a step in the right direction, and commend the action as one not only likely to benefit Underwriters, but also to protect the public from wholesale loss. This action is the more important when it is remembered that the experience of the large companies transacting the business of fire insurance in the United States shows that the proportion of loss to be attributed to the above causes is not less than 33 per cent. of the whole, or a loss to the country of at least twenty-five millions of dollars per annum.—Evening Bulletin.

BUSINESS NOTICES.

☞BY ONE OF THE LEADING PHYSICIANS of Philadelphia city.—A careful examination of mortuary statistics established the fact that one adult person out of every six dies of consumption, and so alarmingly is this disease gaining the ascendancy over all other ills to which flesh is heir, that its approach to one's immediate circle is regarded with perfect horror. If you will carefully examine the records of Materia Medica you will invariably discover that the general want of success in treating diseases has not been a deficiency of pathological knowledge of the functions affected, but of a suitable compound that would act upon the disease and all the sympathetic affections.

This want has at last been met in the Bitter Wine of Iron, prepared by the celebrated Dr. E. F. Kunkle, No 259 North Ninth street, Philadelphia. This excellent compound can be taken by persons with the most delicate stomach without any debilitating effect always giving strength and largely increasing the nervous energy of the patient. In all cases of pulmonary complaints it is admirably adapted to relieve the severity of the symptoms in the advanced stages of the disease, or to arrest it in its incipiency. If you want something that will give you strength, a good appetite, build up your constitution, and in place of moroseness and a lack of energy, give you a brisk and vigorous feeling, try Kunkel's Bitter Wine of Iron. It has already received the meed of praise from thousands who have tested its virtues, and for many years maintained its reputation with unfaded popularity.

Price $1 per bottle. E. F. KUNKEL, Sole Proprietor, No. 259 North Ninth street, below Vine, Philadelphia.

Centaur Liniment.

There is no pain which the Centaur Liniment will not relieve, no swelling it will not subdue and no lameness which it will not cure. This is strong language, but it is true. Where the parts are not gone, its effects are marvelous. It has produced more cures of rheumatism, neuralgia, lock-jaw, palsy, sprains, swellings, caked-breasts, scalds, burns, salt-rheum, earache, &c., upon the human frame, and of strains spavin, galls, &c, upon animals in one year than have all other pretended remedies since the world began. It is a counter-irritant, an all-healing pain reliever. Cripples throw away their crutches, the lame walk, poisonous bites are rendered harmless, and the wounded are healed without a scar. It is no humbug. The recipe is published around each bottle. It is selling as no article ever before sold, and it sells because it does just what it pretends to do. Those who now suffer from rheumatism, pain or swelling, deserve to suffer if they will not use Centaur Liniment. More than 1000 certificates of remarkable cures, including frozen limbs, chronic rheumatism, gout, running tumors, &c., have been received. We will send a circular containing certificates, the recipe, &c., gratis, to any one requesting it. One bottle of the yellow wrapper Centaur Liniment is worth one hundred dollars for spavined or sweenied horses and mules, or for screw-worm in sheep. Stock-owners—this liniment is worth your attention. No family should be without Centaur Liniment. Price, 50c. a bottle, large bottles $1.00. J. B. ROSS & Co.,

53 Broadway, New York.

CASTORIA is more than a substitute for Castor Oil. It is the only safe article in existence which is certain to assimilate the food, regulate the bowels, cure wind-colic and produce natural sleep. It contains neither minerals, morphine or alcohol, and is pleasant to take. Children need not cry and mothers may rest.

AT THE CORNER OF BROAD & NOBLE STS, PAIL'A,

—Stands the gigantic stove FOUNDRY of Messrs. STUART, PETERSON & CO., whose manufactures have long since obtained a national celebrity. It is one of the largest and best appointed establishments in the United States, and we are assured that it was never in a more prosperous condition than it is at present. The firm's great specialty, the "Barley Sheaf" Cook, is more popular than ever, since so many attractive and valuable improvements have been added to it. The centre pieces, holding the plates are now made of extra heavy material, and are rendered perfect gas-burners. The Patent Anti-dust Shaking Sifter, together with the Anti-dust shaking and Dumping Grate, are features especially valuable, and worthy of the closest examination. The "Barley Sheaf" burns both wood and coal.

SAPOLIO
for Washing Dishes and Glassware is invaluable. Cheaper than Soap.

SAPOLIO
removes Stanes from Marble Mantels, Tables and Statuary, from Hard-finished Walls, and from China and Porcelain.

SAPOLIO
removes Stains and Grease from Carpets or other woven fabrics.

There is no one article known that will do so many kinds of work and do it as well as Sapolio. Try it.

HAND SAPOLIO
a new and wonderfully effective Toilet Soap, having no equal in this country or abroad.

HAND SAPOLIO
as an article for the Bath, "reaches the foundation" of all dirt, opens the pores and gives a healthy action and brilliant tint to the skin.

HAND SAPOLIO
Cleanses and Beautifies the Skin, instantly removing any stain or blemish from both hands and face.

HAND SAPOLIO
is without a rival in the world for curing or preventing roughness and chapping of either hands or face.

HAND SAPOLIO
removes Tar, Pitch, Iron or Ink Stains and Grease; for workers in Machine Shops, Mines, &c., is invaluable. For making the Skin White and soft, and giving to it a "bloom of beauty," it is unsurpassed by any Cosmetic known.

HAND SAPOLIO
costs 10 to 15 cents per cake, and everybody should have it. You will like it.

WANTED.—MEN WHO WANT TO MAKE MONEY.

HERE IS AN OPPORTUNITY FOR MAKING MONEY
RARELY PRESENTED IN A LIFETIME.

We have got the best and surest-selling article ever invented, that every housekeeper buys on sight. It is a small Furnace, weighing only six pounds, that can be used with or without a stove. It will fit in the hole of any sized stove or range, and it will do as much work with one quart of fuel—charcoal, chips, coke, corncobs, wood or soft coal—as can be done on any stove with one-half bushel. It will boil, broil, roast, toast, fry and stew. It is the best flat-iron heater in the world. Its economy in saving fuel is marvellous. You have no smoke, gas nor heat in the room. It sells the year round. Retail price only $2. Thousands are sold every week. Any man with a small capital can clear from $20 to $40 per day by owning the right of any good county, and a whole State is of incalculable worth to a man of enterprise. We would send a sample Furnace to an part of the United States on receipt of $2. Address, for circular,

GENERAL NEWS.

—From all parts of Missouri, Southern Illinois, Kansas, and Iowa, come predictions of a large and excellent wheat crop, but short crops of oats and corn.

—A gallery in Sing Sing prison, New York, fell on the 17th inst., carrying down a number of prisoners with it. One convict was killed outright, and several seriously injured.

—The jury in the Richmond duel case says that Mordecai came to his death by a pistol shot wound inflicted by McCarty, and that the seconds were accessory thereto. The verdict also condemns the surgeons for participating in the affair, and for not giving information to the police in time to prevent it.

—Grass-hoppers in innumerable numbers have made their appearance in Texas, and are laying waste all the vegetation. In some localities they have entirely destroyed the corn, consuming it down to a level with the ground. They seem to be moving northward, and it is feared that Missouri, Illinois, Kansas and Nebraska will be visited.

—The internal revenue receipts for the present month have reached nearly seven millions of dollars, and the receipts for the fiscal year to date are $100,129,000. The estimated receipts for the present fiscal year were one hundred and ten millions, and the probabilities, judging from the receipts for the past month, are that they will be exceeded from three to five million.

—The steamship Japan, at San Francisco May 16, brings advices from China to the effect that a terrible conflagration occurred at Hong Kong on the 22d of March. Forty-four acres of houses were destroyed, and five thousand people rendered homeless, In Osaka, Japan, on the 9th of the same month, a great fire caused the loss of many lives and great destruction of property.

—Ulyssus S. Grant, Jr., son of the President, arrived on the steamship Donau on Saturday from Germany, where he has been pursuing his studies. He was taken from the steamer at Quaratine by Collector Arthur and other officials, who went down the bay in a revenue cutter to meet him, and brought up to the city. After a short entertainment by the Custom house officials he was dispatched to Washington.

—The body of an unknown white man was found last Saturday in Chickahominy river, about ten miles from Richmond. It was tied to a heavy fence rail by the neck, middle, and heels, and had a ghastly knife wound in the back, near the neck. The body had apparently been in the water for some time, being much decomposed, and is supposed to be that of Martin Percell, of Ashland, who has been missing for three weeks. Two persons are suspected, and will probably be arrested.

—Owing to the loss of the Atlantic and the temporary disabling of two other steamers, the White Star line has failed several times lately to comply with the terms of the contract for carrying the Saturday European mails from New York, and the Inman Steamship Company having applied to the Post Office Department for the privilege of performing this mail service as formerly, Postmaster General Cresswell has notified the agents of the White Star line to appear in Washington and show cause why their contract should not be revoked on account of the inadequacy of their present service.

THE MODOC WAR.

A NUMBER OF PROMINENT MODOCS KILLED.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 25.—The following despatch has just been received in Yreka, dated Fairchild Ranche, May 20, 4 o'clock p. m.:

Captain Hasbrouck left Boyle's camp May 7th, and has been scouting ever since. The men scaled a ridge twenty-five feet high, in the face of the Modocs, and drove them back, Captain Jackson led the right and Lieutenant Moss the left, and Lieutenants Boutelle and Kyle held the other bold positions. Captain Hasbrouck has not lost a man since the Dry Lake engagement. Artena, Chokus, Longlegs, One Eyed Dixie and two Modoc residents of this ranche, last evening entertained the five women captured by Captain Hasbrouck's command, and from them gleaned interesting accounts of the Modoc operations during the last few months. The captives are Mrs. Wachmetel, Boston Charley's two sisters, the mother of Black Jim, and one maiden whose relatives have attained no notable distinction. They report that Shacknasty Bill, Steamboat Frank, Ellensman, Hooker Jim's father, Boston Nick, and several other Modocs have been killed and many wounded. Curly-headed Jack carried a piece of lead in his body several days, and when last seen was apparantly booked for the happy hunting grounds.

Capt. Hasbrouck encountered and got the Modoc into this last difficulty. The account of the cause of disaffection among the Modocs after the battle is interesting. Capt. Jack consulted a stolen chronometer, and after sundry gestures and exclamations informed his followers that they would shed rifle bullets as a duck does water, and escape unharmed. The confidence this statement inspired, was rapidly dispelled by Cap. Hasbrouck's encounter, when several Modocs were killed, and others wounded.

Indignation reigned supreme in Jack's household.

The Cottonwood branch of the tribe from Fairchild's decided that they would fight no more. This resolution led to Jack's clandestine departure. The Cottonwoods—numbering twenty warriors and fifty women and children—hurried to the Snow mountains, at the southern end of Lava Deposit, preparatory to traveling to the Yainox reservation and imploring pardon from the great father at Washington. The sudden advent of Hasbrouck's cavalry and Warm Spring Indians disturbed their peaceful meditations, and caused them to run or fight.

LATEST—SURRENDER OF THE HEEL-CREEK INDIANS.

YREKA, May 23.—From J. H. M'Coy, who just came in from Fairchild's we learn that the Heel Creek band were brought in by Fairchild's party, and surrendered to General Davis. Their surrender was apparently unconditional. They gave up their arms and were put under guard, The band numbered fifty-five men, women and children, including fifteen warriors. Among the latter are [illegible] Charley, Shacknasty [illegible], Head Doctor Frank and [illegible], the best fighting men Captain Jack had. Boston is believed to have been killed. The troops are hunting for Hooker Jim. It is supposed that there are twenty warriors with Captain Jack, whose whereabouts is unknown, though it is surmised he is at Pit river mountains.

WISHART'S PINE TREE TAR CORDIAL,

NATURE'S GREAT REMEDY

FOR THE

Throat & Lungs.

It is gratifying to us to inform the public that Dr. L. Q. C. Wishart's Pine Tree Tar Cordial, for Throat and Lung Diseases, has gained an enviable reputation from the Atlantic to the Pacific coast, and from thence to some of the first families of Europe, not through the press alone, but by persons throughout the States actually benefitted and cured at his office. While he publishes less, so say our reporters, he is unable to supply the demand. It gains and holds its reputation—

First. Not by stopping cough, but by loosening and assisting nature to throw off the unhealthy matter collected about the throat and bronchial tubes, which causes irritation.

Second. It removes the cause of irritation (which produces cough) of the mucous membrane and bronchial tubes, assists the lungs to act and throw of the unhealthy secretions, and purifies the blood.

Third. It is free from squills, lobelia, ipicac and opium, of which most throat and lung remedies are composed, which allay cough only, and disorganize the stomach. It has a soothing effect on the stomach, acts on the liver and kidneys, and lymphatic and nervous regions, thus reaching to every part of the system, and in its invigorating and purifying effects it has gained a reputation which it must hold above all others in the market.

NOTICE.

The Pine Tree Tar Cordial,

Great American Dyspepsia Pills,

AND

WORM SUGAR DROPS!

Being under my immediate direction, they shall not lose their curative qualities by the use of cheap and impure articles.

WHEN LOVE IS KIND.

BY FLORENCE PERCY.

"When love is kind," sings Gracie from her playthings
Cheerful and free,"—her childish treble flows
Serenely on,—"Love's sure to find," she warbles
"Welcome from me"—then makes a sudden close,
Meeting my smile—and flushes like a rose.

Poor little singer; how the pretty crimson
Mantles her face—cheek, brow, and sea-shell ears—
Why should she color so to find me listening!
What does she know of Love's wild doubts and fears
This merry maid of half-a-dozen years!

"Don't laugh—that is a grown up song" she falters
Toppling her house of blocks against the wall,
"I heard it sung one day, and I remembered—
It isn't in my Mother Goose at all—"
—And stoops to hide her face—and kiss her doll.

When is love kind! When, with an angel's seeming,
It lures us like a butterfly in May.
Leads us through fragrant lanes and briery hollows,
And leaves us lost when daylight fades away!
"Kind!" No—nor is it love,—alack-a-day.

When is love kind! When strong and steadfast
By time and trial purified and proved,
It leads us with solitude and anguish,
—A burden never lightened or removed—
Lest harm or sorrow chance to our beloved!

Or when a mother clasps her child and trembles
For all that coming years may have in store!
Or when the child, won by a smooth-voiced stranger,
Turns from its mother, and the dear homedoor
Whose portals she may enter nevermore!

When is Love kind! When it beholds us captive,
And brings us dreams of what can never be!
Laughs at our helplessness, and mocks the fetters,
From which no power but death can set us free
And sings the sweetest song of liberty!

When is love kind! When one who loves us suffers
All toil and pain and hardship for our sake—
Bearing our burdens with unwearried patience—
Still faithful while we sleep and when we wake
With heart too proud to murmur or to break

When is Love kind!—I see when Love is cruel,
Fickle—enslaving—sorrowful or blind,—
But kind—ah, when!—Wise Gracie hugs her kitten,
And sings her song with an untroubled mind,
Mother of twenty dolls, when is Love kind!

—Portland Transcript.

The Selfish Acorn.

"Will you lend me your slate a little while?" said Mary Graham to her sister Ellen.

"No" answered Ellen, "I do not want to lend it."

"Sister won't you fix my kite?" said Henry, as he entered the house with two pieces of the kite in his hand.

"No," replied Ellen, "I am busy and can't be bothered."

Her mother looked up from her sewing, and said; "You are not very obliging, Ellen,"

"No, mother," replied Ellen, "I am tired of being obliging. I am always lending or giving away my things, or doing some work to oblige some one, and nobody seems to care. Yesterday I had some nuts when I was in school. Susan Brown asked me for some, and I gave her half of them; but when we were coming home she would not let me roll her hoop at all. Then Henry wanted a pencil this morning, and I gave him the longest one I had; but when I asked him afterward to show me how to do a sum, he would not, but hurried off to school, though there was plenty of time. It is always so. Those that I give the most to, and do the most for, are always the most disobliging to me, and I have made up my mind that it does not pay to put myself out so much for them."

"Do you think you will be any happier?" asked her mother.

"I will see," answered Ellen. "I am tired of obliging ungrateful folks."

"You remind me of a fable I once heard," said her mother.

"What was it?" asked Ellen.

"Get a chair, my dear, and sit here by me, and I will tell you.

"Near a house in the country grew a large oak tree. Its branches spread out far and wide. Many little plants grew near it that were not fitted to endure much sunshine, and the kind old oak sheltered them, and they grew and blossomed, and seemed to enjoy life. The children who lived in the farm-house liked a cool, shady place to play in. So they brought a bench and placed it under the tree, and many a pleasant hour they sat there reading and crocheting, and indulging in pleasant chat. One of the limbs of the tree projected out, and the children coaxed their father to tie a rope to it and make them a swing. So the old tree stood year after year, imparting shade and coolness and blessing to all who sought rest under its branches.

"One summer the tree was laden with acorns. The acorns were of no use to any one while they remained on the tree, and they had nothing to do but to grow a little; so they had plenty of leisure. One acorn watched the flowers that were growing so beautifully near the grand old tree, and the children who played so merrily beneath its protecting shade, for many days, and one morning it spoke thus:

"This old tree is very foolish to take so much pains for these silly little flowers and noisy children. Neither the flowers nor the children care for the tree, except for the shade it gives them. If I am ever planted, I will not trouble myself to grow so much. It is all nonsense—time thrown away."

"While it was thus speaking, the father of the children came along with an ax on his shoulder. He stopped at the tree, and looking at it, said: "Yes, this will do. I have not time to go into the woods, but I will cut down this old tree, and when it is dry it will be good firewood." So he chopped away lustily at the trunk of the tree, and soon it fell with a great crash.

"The acorn dropped off as it fell. When it had got over the bruise occasioned by the fall it said: "After so many years of usefulness the tree is cut down. It is just as I said. The world is ungrateful. Just wait till I am planted, and see if I will be such a great fool as that old tree." While it was thus talking a little boy came along, and stooping, picked it up and put it in his pocket. The next day he planted it.

The acorn lay in the ground, thinking, "I am not going to push my head up into the world—it is too much trouble." But it soon became tired of its dark prison, and concluded to push up a little shoot, to see what was going on in the world above. So up it went till it was about a foot high. Then it stopped growing. The roots tried in vain to sink deeper into the ground and drink in the nourishment that would make it a tree. The little shoot remembered what it thought when it was only an acorn, and it said: "No, I will not grow. No ungrateful children shall play under my branches, and no thankless flowers shall be refreshed by me. I intend to stay just so high."

"And so it did. But a large pine tree near, who heard it muttering, shook itself with laughter, and said. "Oh, no, you won't grow! Who do you think will be the loser? I find it delicious to spread out my roots and drink in the sap, and enlarge my branches, and then, too, I have such a fine view of the world, and see so far. It is a glorious thing to live and to grow. That poor little shoot will lose all this happiness. Of course I shall be cut down some day, but while I do live I intend to make the most of my existence, and to be all I can."

Ellen sat and thought for some minutes after her mother had finished the fable. She was a good, kind-hearted girl, and always ready to acknowledge when she had done wrong. At last she said:—

"Do you know, mother, what your story reminds me of?"

"No," answered her mother. "what is it?"

"Why, of dear old Aunt Patience and poor Mr. Knowles. Aunt Patience is so good and so kind. It seems as if she loved everything and everybody in the world, and we children always like to go there, because she is so happy and so glad to see us. But poor old Mr. Knowles! Dear me! We all get out of the way when we see him coming. He is so cross and surly, and always looks as if he longed to bite us. Do you suppose Aunt Patience has ever had much trouble?"

"Yes, Ellen, she has had many great trials, but she has always loved everybody, and tried to help them, and that makes her so full of sunshine. But Mr. Knowles, poor man, has never loved any one, or tried to benefit anybody, so now no one loves him."

"Yes, mother, I see," said Ellen. "I believe I will spread out my roots and drink in the sap and do all the good I can, for I have no desire to be a poor mean shrub when I am old."—Christian Union.

A HANGING GARDEN OF SPONGE.—A hanging garden of sponge is one of the latest novelties in gardening. Take a white sponge of large size, and sow it full of rice, oats, or wheat. Then place for a week or ten days in a shallow dish, and, as the sponge will absorb the moisture, the seeds will begin to sprout before many days. When this has fairly taken place, the sponge may be suspended by means of cords from a hook at the top of the window where a little sun will enter. It will thus become a mass of green, and can be kept wet by merely immersing it in a bowl of water.

Agricultural.

THE INDEPENDENT FARMER.

How pleasant it seems to live on a farm,
Where nature's so gaudily dressed,
And sit neath the shade of the old locust tree
As the sun is just sinking to rest;
But not half so pleasant to hoe in the field,
Where the witch grass is six inches high,
With the hot, scorching sun pouring down on your back
Seems each moment as though you would die!

'Tis pleasant to sit in the cool porch door,
While you smoke half reclined at your ease,
Looking out o'er your beautiful fields of grass,
That sways to and fro in the breeze;
But not quite so pleasant to start with your scythe
Ere the morning sun smiles o'er the land,
And work till your clothes are completely wet through,
And blisters shall cover your hand.

In keeping a dairy there's surely delight,
And it speaks of contentment and plenty
To see a large stable well filled with choice cows
Say, numbering from fifteen to twenty!
And yet it seems hard, when you've worked from the dawn
Till the sun disappears from your sight,
To think of the cows you have yet got to milk,
Before you retire for the night.

But the task fairly over you cheer up once more
And joyfully seek your repose,
To dream of the cream-pots with luxury filled,
And milk-pans in numberless rows;
But the sweet dream is broken when early next day,
You're politely requested to churn,
And for three weary hours, with strength ebbing fast
The victim despondingly turns

But in raising young pigs is surely a charm,
When they sell at the present high price,
And of all the young stock which a farmer can raise,
There's nothing that looks half so nice,
How cheerful one feels when he leaves them at night,
The encouraging number of eleven!
But his joy slightly wanes when he goes out next day,
And of live ones can count only seven!

'Tis pleasant to sit by a warm winter fire
When night craws her curtain around,
With both wife and children to make home complete,
And peace and contentment abound;
But ecstacy fades when you shoulder your ax,
And trudge off a mile through the snow,
While the cutting west wind drives the snow in your face,
So you scarcely can see where you go.

But no one disputes that the farmer is blessed
With true independence and labor—
Whose food don't depend on the whims of mankind,
Like that of his mercantile neighbor;
For God, in His mercy, looks down from above
And paternally gives him his bread,
Provided he works eighteen hours every day,
And devotes only six to his bed!

—The first cheese factory in Vermont, and the second in the country, was established in Chittenden county in 1858. There are now sixty-seven factories in the state. The town of Richmond makes 200 tons of cheese a year.

—A gentleman of Springfield, Mass., who bought two car loads of corn in Iowa for ten cents per bushel, and sold it in that city for seventy cents a bushel, found on making up his account that actually he had received six and one-half cents, the other fifty-three and a half cents having gone for freight.

—The milk that will make one pound of butter will make two pounds of cheese; and the butter is worth twice as much per pound as cheese. Then the buttermilk is worth twice as much for feeding hogs or calves as the whey, leaving a small ballance in favor of making butter.

How Much the Hog Weighed.

A bluff-looking man, in a farmer's workday costume, entered a railway car at a way station. The car was well filled, all the seats being occupied but one, which was half filled by a finely dressed exquisite. The farmer seeing his only chance for a seat, asked the exquisite if t'other half of that seat was "took." Receiving a negative answer, he responded: "Wall, then, I reckon I'll squat."

Like most of our hardy yeomen he was inclined to be sociable.

"Snug winter morning," said he.

No response.

"Sohuldn't wonder if we had some more snow afore night."

Still on response from exquisite, who looked out of the rear window, evidently much annoyed.

After several attempts to elicit some reply, the farmer gave a yawn and quietly remarked;

"Killed a hog yesterday; bet you can't guess how much he weighed?"

Driven almost to desperation, the poor fellow said, tartly:

"Four hundred pounds."

Yawning again—"No; didn't weigh that."

"Well, three hundred and fifty, then."

Another yawn—"No; didn't weigh three and half."

Very impatiently—"Three hundred."

Yawning still—"No; not that much."

Almost ready to explode—"How much did your old hog weigh, anyhow?"

"Wall, he wa'n't much of a hog, and I didn't weigh him."

SUNDAY READINGS—NO. 15.

Another week has closed its journey and joined the uncounted procession of the ages that have dropped into the abyss of time. It has borne with it hopes that made life's brightness, sorrows that clouded the fairest scenes, disappointments that almost crushed the life out of warm aspiring hearts; but it also scattered along its chequered way blessings too numerous to number.

If some carefully devised plans have failed, many have been crowned with success; if some friends have laid aside the garb of mortality and left vacant places never to be filled, others have been spared sickness and death and still bless with their presence our daily lives; and some immortals have entered the loved circles to beautify the home and awaken fresh love in yearning bosoms.

Sometimes the years glide by without rippling the current of affairs and the soul rests in a calm which is refreshing to its needs, again events crowd each other until life seems a stormy sea without a haven of refuge to the tempest tossed mariner. How grateful should one be that human fate is diversified, that calm and storm alternate, else the indolence and confidence begotten of unbroken success, or the despair born of continued defeats would palsy all energy.

With gratitude for the past and hope and trust for the future, let each week be welcomed.—Though the unknown paths where it may lead man goes not alone.—The All-seeing eye, the Almighty arm are present in shadow as in sunshine and the trusting spirit can know no fear, no distrust in the presence of its best and most efficient friend. Therefore, to walk bravely and cheerfully along the allotted way, the trust evolved from submission and faith is the all-essential requisite. The pure heart knows of the doctrine whether it be true, the impure can never know, for sin makes blind the mental vision whereby we see God.

If sin has left its traces in the past, now is the season to resolve that its empire shall be broken and its plague spots disappear. There is no freedom where guilt is. The drunkard is the slave of the cup, the gambler of the excitement and fascination of the fatal dice, and so of all other allurements to leave the bright and narrow path of duty for the hollow promises of sin in any form.

What shall the future be in human experience? There are many circumstances beyond man's control. Life and death are in God's kind hand; success and failure are all known to Him and permitted in His providence, but to His accountable children He has committed great trusts and for these a solemn responsibility rests upon each.

Talents many or few each possess. Shall the one, because so insignificant, be hidden in a napkin, or shall it not rather be so improved that it may multiply and make its possessor rich with that which cannot blight with its touch? If there is one obligation pressing home to the individual it is that of self-improvement.

There are passions to subdue or regulate, desires to chasten, good impulses to cherish; there are faculties to use and enlarge. The world of knowledge lies on every side. Nature teems with instruction, air, earth, water are crowded with themes of interest whose study enlarges and elevates, and beyond our atmosphere is the sublimest realm of all.

These sources are inexhaustible and afford a rich return for all endeavors to fathom their extent and variety, and they all lead the mind to God, author and support of all. If so mighty and various are his works, what glory and might must be His!

Self-improvement in knowledge must not absorb all one's faculties. Am I my brother's keeper? was asked of old. Yes, in a measure each is his brother's keeper. By friendly counsel, by self-devotion and good example, by wise charity free and unobtrusive, the soul grows in the noblest direction. If these things have had no weight in the past let them regulate the future, and time will do its righteous work in elevating character and opening springs of happiness such as are never found in the pursuit of unlawful pleasure.

Thanks for the past, its tears and smiles, its disappointments and success, for each have borne their lesson. Trust for the coming days, whether dark or bright, for the good Father never forgets his children, but opens to them peace on earth and an eternity of bliss with Him if they turn not away from his guidance.

VINEGAR BITTERS
VEGETABLE — FREE FROM ALCOHOL
PURELY — D. WALKER'S — CALIFORNIA
VINEGAR BITTERS

No Person can take these Bitters according to directions, and remain long unwell, provided their bones are not destroyed by mineral poison or other means, and vital organs wasted beyond the point of repair.

Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Headache, Pain in the Shoulders, Coughs, Tightness of the Chest, Dizziness, Sour Eructations of the Stomach, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Bilious Attacks, Palpitation of the Heart, Inflammation of the Lungs, Pain in the regions of the Kidneys, and a hundred other painful symptoms, are the offsprings of Dyspepsia. One bottle will prove a better guarantee of its merits than a lengthy advertisement.

For Female Complaints, in young or old, married or single, at the dawn of womanhood, or the turn of life, these Tonic Bitters display so decided an influence that improvement is soon perceptible.

For Inflammatory and Chronic Rheumatism and Gout, Bilious, Remittent and Intermittent Fevers, Diseases of the Blood, Liver, Kidneys and Bladder, these Bitters have no equal. Such Diseases are caused by Vitiated Blood.

They are a gentle Purgative as well as a Tonic, possessing the merit of acting as a powerful agent in relieving Congestion or Inflammation of the Liver and Visceral Organs, and in Bilious Diseases.

For Skin Diseases, Eruptions, Tetter, Salt Rheum, Blotches, Spots, Pimples, Pustules, Boils, Carbuncles, Ring-worms, Scald-Head, Sore Eyes, Erysipelas, Itch, Scurfs, Discolorations of the Skin, Humors and Diseases of the Skin of whatever name or nature, are literally dug up and carried out of the system in a short time by the use of these Bitters.

Grateful Thousands proclaim VINEGAR BITTERS the most wonderful Invigorant that ever sustained the sinking system.

Bellefonte and County.

——Bellefonte has its quota of professional loafers.

——Postal cards are beginning to arrive in Williamsport.

——Strawberries are for sale at sixty cents a box, or five cents a piece.

——When does the first pic-nic come off? The hackmen want to know.

——Crowded out—The communication from "Alpha." It will appear next week.

——A base ball match is talked of between the heavy weights and light weights of Bellefonte athletes.

——Correction. In REPUBLICAN last week the $2,00 missionary corn money credited to "Walker Lutheran U. S. S," should be Walker South U. S. School.

——Our readers in the rural districts can greatly serve the public good, of this time, by sending us a few lines on the condition and prospects of the crops, farm work, etc.

——A lady suggests a condition on which she will give us a kiss. We feel in duty bound to say to her that kisses are things that at every proper opportunity we set our face against.

——The Augusta, Ky. Chronicle gives the following warning: "Delinquent subscribers should not permit their daughters to wear this paper for a bustle, there being so much due on it there is danger of their taking cold."

——"Sarcasm is the natural language of the devil," are the first lines on the first page of the Lycoming Standard of last week. Then follow long editorials of sarcastic abuse of President Grant. Well, we will take your word for it.

——Our local editor is absent. He left this place on Saturday last to visit his friends in Clinton county. Up to this writing he has not returned, and therefore we suppose he is having a good time and don't care whether we have any "local" this week or not.

——Lock Haven folks are getting upon their ear because Haines, the author of the "History of Lock Haven," has not made the place large enough, and want to prosecute the man for libel. Don't get excited, gentlemen, you will live through it in spite of Haines.

——Mr. Wm. P. Humes' horse came home suddenly from Humes' Mill on sday morning, without either William or the carryall. The latter was badly broken. Mr. Humes was picked up along the road, carried to his home and Dr. Fairlam sent for who soon convinced him that he was not at all injured. We suppose the horse is for sale.

——We are informed by the Raftsman's Journal that the editor of the Tyrone Herald is a slang scribbler; of the Huntingdon Globe a dog; of the Philipsburg Journal a tea-pot; of the Hollidaysburg Standard an ignoramus; of the Johnstown Democrat a blockhead, and of the BELLEFONTE REPUBLICAN a woman, all in one issue. There is something the matter with that man. He is not well.

——The best stoves, glossiest tinware, and all the paraphernalia pertaining to cooking apparatus, are always on hand in full supply in the store of Wetsler & Twitmire, opposite the Bush House. Any one wanting anything in their line will do well to call, as they will not only find the firm composed of good-looking men, but will find them genial fellows with whom to deal, and always disposed to accommodate customers.

——Again we insist that the borough officials should give the people of Bellefonte a secure and safe board-walk on Water Street. Many people have to walk that rickety and dilapidated walk every night in fear of stepping between great openings and tumbling into the creek.—"A word to the wise, &c."—Watchman.

We agree with the Watchman in the above, and think the walk should be constructed. The people, as embodied in Jack Spangler, the local penny-a-liner of the Watchman, ought to be accommodated. Jack's appeals should certainly be heeded, because his life is greatly hazarded in walking to and from his boarding-house on said walk. Poor Jack's vision becomes so much obfusticated because of an overdose of prescribed local option occasionally, that rickety sidewalks are unsafe for him to tread upon. We hope the borough will accommodate Jack.

——The arrangements for most fully and respectfully commemorating the gallant braves who fell in the battle for the right, by strewing their graves with flowers, are being generally discussed and commanding the attention of our citizens. The visitation of the various cemeteries in and around Bellefonte will be under the auspices and management of the Post of the Grand Army of the Republic of this place. The Post has extended invitations to all the Sabbath Schools, public schools and various orders to participate in the exercises. That there will be a full turnout of all on Friday next, and the day sacredly observed, we have no doubt. Captain W. Norris, of Harrisburg, is to be the orator of the day. The Captain is a good speaker, and is especially eloquent on an occasion such as Decoration Day affords. We hope that throughout the county there will not be left unnoticed unobserved or unremembered the grave of a single fallen hero. Let some hand be found that will bear to each Mound, however humble or obscure, that marks the last resting place of the soldier dead, a tribute of respect. Programme of the day in another column.

——An alarm of fire on Sunday evening last, about eight o'clock, abbreviated divine services in the various churches, in rather an alarming manner. The alarm proved to be a false one, and originated from a party by the name of George Lose, who was intoxicated somewhat, and was quarrelling with his brother. While quarrelling the police interfered, when George yelled fire, and the alarm was carried from one to another until it became general, arousing the town and emptying the churches. George was safely incarcerated in Fort Shaffer, for a few hours, for reflection, and to give him an opportunity to work off his worrying load of local option. A gentle reminder in the way of a liberal fine imposed in cases as the above would have a wholesome influence, and be a good corrective to some of our wayward young men.

——William Williams, of Huntingdon, purchased William Felty's stock of marble and tombstones, and becomes his successor in the business of furnishing monuments for the dead. He has leased the premises from Mr. Sands, and will carry on the business at the old stand. Although Williams' business is relatively a dead one, yet he is not a dead man in business by any means, but to the contrary is always alive and consulting the interests and requirements of his patrons. All who give him a call will be pleased, and will be fully accommodated in his line.

——R. C. informs us that the community which has received the misnomer of "Whisky Hollow," lies midway between Boalsburg and Centre Hall. He has been there several times and testifies that he saw no "whisky" and very little "hollow." It forms a respectable portion of Pennsvalley. A few years ago certain individuals, then living not far from Bellefonte, took a jug of whisky into this community and disgraced, not the community but themselves. Hence the name. The new Sunday school is not called by this misnomer, but the "Manor Union Sunday School."

——The gay and festive of our young folks opened the season of social entertainment at the Bush House, by way of doing honor to Terpsichore in worshipping gracefully at his shrine. The music by an Italian troupe, was elegant and enlivening, to which the well dressed dancers moved with grace and ease. The refreshments served up by the hosts of the Bush House were in just keeping with their reputation as first-class hotelists and restauranteurs. The social was quite pleasant and enjoyable, and was an earnest of what the present season will bring forth.

——The last half dozen items have been written under very trying circumstances. We have been industriously engaged in warding off the persistent attacks of the first fly of the season, and if he is a fair representation of his followers we pray "good Lord deliver us." We bore with him until our patience "glode away," then we arose in our wrath and slew the "cuss." And now we are happy.

——In a recent notice of the pugilistic exercise between W. S. Wagner and Eckley, in which Eckley got out through a window of Hoffer's tobacco store, with a little help from Wagner, we erred in giving Eckley's first name, as it was Tom instead of Joe Eckley. "Not for Joe" would we leave the public under a misapprehension, nor do Joe an injustice, therefore we correct as above.

——The Bloomsburg Republican takes the people of Bloomsburg to account for their lack of interest in the preparations for the celebration of Decoration Day, and fears that the day will pass without notice. We hope there are patriotic citizens enough in Bloomsburg to do honor to the brave boys who laid down their lives in defence of the country's honor.

——Hon. Saml. Calvin, of Hollidaysburg, has been appointed to a seat in the Constitutional Convention, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Hon. H. N. McAllister.

——The Pennsylvania State Sabbath School Association will hold its ninth annual convention in the city of Titusville, June 3, 4 and 5, 1873, in the Methodist Episcopal Church, corner Perry and Pine streets.

The sessions will begin Tuesday evening, June 3d, at 8 o'clock, to be continued throughout Wednesday and Thursday.

Each Sunday school in the State is requested to send at least two delegates, and Pastors of all Evangelical churches are cordially invited.

Entertainment will be provided for all delegates who will notify L. B. Silliman, Esq., of Titusville, Secretary of Local Committee, on or before May 31.

The Philadelphia and Reading Railroad will pass delegates to Harrrisburg or Williamsport, from all principal points on its road, on application at ticket office. Fare two-thirds the usual rates.

The Pennsylvania Central Railroad will pass delegates for two-thirds fare, on presentation at ticket office of an order which must be applied for with name and address at the following points, viz:

Philadelphia—Joshua L. Bailey, 311 Chestnut street.
Harrisburg—James W. Weir.
Pottsville—C. W. Wells, Esq.
Pittsburgh—T. J. Gillespie.

A "Museum" will be provided for, and opportunity given for Religious Publishing Societies to display their wares.

It is expected that Professor Wm. Johnson, of Philadelphia, will conduct the singing.

The International Lesson for the succeeding Sunday will be taught, and practically illustrated, and live Sunday School questions will be presented by the Business Committee for consideration.

District, county and township secretaries, with editors, pastors, superintendents and teachers, are requested to give circulation to this call in every part of their field.

Come up, brethren, from all parts of the State, and make the Titusville convention the best of all.

By order of the Executive Com.
LEWIS D. VAIL, Chairman.
Philadelphia, May 14, 1873.

——At a meeting of the stockholders of the Bellefonte Car Manufacturing Company, held at the office of E. & E. Blanchard, on Saturday, the 25th of May last, the following permanent organization of the Company was made, to wit:

President—Wm. McEllan, of Chambersburg.
Vice Pres't—Hon. A. G. Curtin, of Bellefonte.
Directors—Geo. C. Wilkins, Tyrone.
E. C. Humes, Bellefonte.
Edmund Blanchard, do.
D. G. Bush, do.
Treas & Sec—E. M. Blanchard, do.

The following officers were elected by the board:

Superintendent—Jack McEllan, of Chambersburg.
General Foreman—John Strike, of Chambersburg.
Purchasing Agent—S. Austin Brew, of Bellefonte.

All the work for the erection of the buildings have been put under contract and the work will be pushed forward rapidly to completion.

——Col. D. G. Bush last week effected the sale of several acres of land at the head of the planing mill dam, to Messrs. Batchelor and Fisher, of Lock Haven, and Shively of Luzerne county. On last Friday the contract for the stone work for the erection of a paper mill upon said land, was let, and the buildings will be pushed forward at once and as rapidly as possible. It is expected to have them completed early in the fall, so as to be ready for occupancy and the manufacture of paper. Truly Bellefonte is now beginning to march rapidly toward her great and true destiny—that of a manufacturing centre. From now on we don't feel that we hazard much if we prophesy for our town a decade of heretofore unknown and unexampled prosperity and growth.

——Bellefonte's litigant excursionists to Pittsburgh of last week have returned, and their genial countenances again greet us on the street as they were wont to do. Some of them, however, are not as smiling and cheery as they used to be. From the evidence adduced—and no doubt some credit is due to the able manner in which A. O. Furst conducted his side of the case—the jury saw fit to bring in a verdict of six thousand dollars against the defendants, which would have the tendency to chafe the smoothness of the temperament of any firm, even if that temperament be glassy smooth.

The party report favorably of the Iron City, and the absence of local option.

——TO INVALIDS. Recollect that on Saturday of this week, May 31st, is the last day for four months that you consult Dr. A. C. Jackson. The Doctor has visited our city for many years, and his record is A. 1. Bear in mind his appointment. At Garman's Hotel, on Saturday, May 31. One day only. Consultation free.

——The Valentine Iron Company at Williamsport, made a permanent organization on last Thursday, May 18th, and elected the following officers:

President—Mahlen Fisher.
Directors—Mahlen Fisher,
Peter Herdic,
Wm. H. Armstreug,
A. S. Valentine,
Edmund Blanchard.
Treas & Sec—Edmund Blanchard.
Genl. Supt.—Evan M. Valentine.
Asst. Supt.—Harry C. Valentine.

Arrangements were made to put the erection of the works under contract immediately.

——Frank Grice, of Bush House fame, had his bay pony Jim to convey him in his buggy to Milesburg, on Friday last. When he arrived at the village, Frank having a little side business to attend to hitched Jim to a post. Jim soon became impatient, with the tameness of his position, and severed his connection with the post, and at top speed struck for home. It is needless to state that Frank struck too about the same time, but notwithstanding his great capacity for stretch, Jim and the buggy stretched away from him. The race was really interesting to beholders, especially the rear part of it, Frank moved with such a graceful bearing. On the arrival of horse and buggy at the Bush House stable, it was learned but little damage was done. The horse was unhurt, and the buggy minus but one spoke. Considering the number of curves and turns in the road, and made by the runaway parties, it is really marvellous how all escaped.

——The new Bank building on the corner is rapidly moving toward completion. It is decidedly a neat and elegant building and will be quite an architectural ornament to our town. The little fortress on top has a commanding position, and when the institution is fully manned, with Capt. Jones on the ramparts, to signal to President Humes and Cashier Harris, the approach of danger, and any hostile indication of the opposing forces on the opposite corners of the diamond, the First National will be an institution of considerable interest, and of which larger towns than Bellefonte might be glad to boast. The institutions across the corner must either elevate their guns and lower their charges, or else yield the palm.

——Welch & Co., at the great Book Dispensary, keep on hand the latest editions of the best authors. Their circulating library has been continually added to, until it is sufficiently ample to supply the taste of the most fastidious literateur. They never had a finer assortment of books, writing paper, envelopes confections, knick-knacks, &c., than they now have on hand. Call and look in upon them; you will be pleasantly and graciously received by the firm and clerks, and your wants supplied.

BELLEFONTE.

The Picturesque—the Beautiful—the Delightful—A Two Days' sojourn There.

BELLEFONTE, PA., May 9, 1873.

The attractive and delightfully located borough of Bellefonte is included in that class of villages noted for their beauty, and which must be visited to be appreciated. A pen and ink description can never do it justice After a two days sojourn here, it is not surprising to writer that so many of Pennsylvania's eminent men delight to reside here, or that so much of our Commonwealth's ability and intelligence is centered in this lovely spot. The pretty name Bellefonte is taken from the clear, limpid, never-failing flood of water that unceasingly springs from near the base of a high hill, a few rods from the business centre of the town. If the borough cannot be described on paper, by reason of its picturesque beauty, neither can Bellefonte spring, in a labored statement of its immensity, the clearness of its water, and the independent manner by which it escapes its artificial bounds to mingle with the broad, rapid-running stream that flows through the borough. The capacity of the stream is difficult to realize, but some idea may be formed when I state that over 15,000 gallons of water flow from it per minute, or about 1,000,000 gallons an hour. The whole city of Harrisburg now uses less than 5,000,000 gallons in a day, or 19,000,000 gallons less than the never-failing spring of Bellefonte yields every day, the astonishment and wonder of all who gaze upon it.

In this communication I might refer at length to many of the attractions of Bellefonte and surrounding country—to the mountain streams abounding in mountain trout; to the "Snow Shoe" of the Alleghenies, twenty miles distant; to the State Agricultural college, twelve miles away, and to many other objects worthy of special mention; but too much of that which is rare makes the mere ordinary attractions of life insipid, and wearies the most attractive reader.

——On Friday evening last at the Court House the Bellefonte High Schools gave their annual exhibition and concert. The following is a complete programme of the exercises:

The above programme was performed in a most perfect and successful manner, by some four hundred children, in unison, representing the eight grades of the public schools, to a very crowned house. The children were all finely and neatly arrayed, with good taste, and most admirably arranged on rising seats in amphitheatre style, so as to produce a most favorable and pleasing effect upon the audience as it assembled,

We are not prepared nor have the time and space to comment upon the merits of each individual performance. Nor shall we attempt to single out any as entitled to special notice, as all was so well performed that we could not do so without doing some slight injustice to others. Suffice it to say that the whole exercises were gone through with an order, discipline and promptness that evinced the most thorough and successful preparation. There was neither a failure, blunder or mistake, but the whole perfectly executed on the part of both teachers and pupils in a manner in keeping with the thoroughness of their preparation. The exercises consumed an hour and forty minutes during which time the audience, although the house was packed almost to suffocation, preserved the best of order and frequently signified its hearty appreciation of the performances in the most orderly and approved manner.

The children during the whole of the exercises were wholly exempt from restlessness, and were most exemplarp in their decorum and evinced a discipline and control that surpassed anything of the kind we ever before had the pleasure of witnessing.

The whole affair was one that teachers, pupils and the public interested, have a right to feel proud of. It surely was a most satisfactory showing of the school year's work, and a satisfactory evidence that the public schools of Bellefonte are under a very wise and competent supervision.

That Prof. Hastings, the Principal of the schools, is a most successful teacher and disciplinarian, and possesses a power of control and government in the school room unexcelled and seldom equaled, is well evidenced by the success that has attended his administrations in this town for the past six years. The schools were never better, nor in a more flourishing and satisfactory condition than they are now, which speaks very favorably for the whole corps of teachers.

During, or rather a part of the exercises was the reception of the report of the committee of examiners, appointed to award the medals, which we give below.

After the report, the medals were presented by George M. Yocum, Esq., Prerident of the School Board, to the prize winners, after which Master Montie Ward acquitted himself most creditably in delivering the valedictory.

James T. Hale, Esq., read the report of the examining committee, and with well chosen words and graceful manner presented the committee's testimonials.

The committee appointed to attend the examination and award the medals, at the High School of Bellefonte, would respectfully report that they attended the several examinations in the above mentioned school, and were extremely pleased and gratified at the thoroughness shown by the scholars in all the branches in which they were examined, reflecting, as it did, great credit upon the students and instructors.

Honorable mention deserves to be made of the following pupils in the senior division: Misses Nannie T. McGinley, Bella K. Rankin, Ragena Meace, Kate McCaffra, and Montie Ward, but the committee would report that they have unanimously awarded the first medal for the best examination in all the departments, for the clearest and most lucid solution of all questions propounded, to Miss Lizzie Campbell, in the junior division. Misses Bertie Alexander, Mary Morgan, and Julia McCafferty, deserve honorable mention while, for the most perfect showing of discipline and attainment the committee would aware the first medal in this division to Miss Sallie McGinley.

The committee would further report that after hearing the several examinations, they agreed among themselves, to present a slight token of their personal appreciation to the pupils in the senior division of whom honorable mention has been made, hoping that their gifts may serve as incentives to future efforts.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

JAMES T. HALE,
G. F. HARRIS, M.D.
D. F. FORTNEY,
H. Y. STITZER,
} Committee

The Committee appointed to award the prize offered by the teacher of school No. 3, Miss R. J. McGinley, after a thorough examination, decided in favor of Miss Mary Ettelle. Honorable mention was also made of Miss Victoria Lyons and Master Willie Kline, as worthy competitors. As to the others whom they were compelled to group, they report that they were exceedingly well pleased with their proficiency in branches taught, and their general deportment to their teacher, whose successful training of the children under her charge, entitles her to the gratitude and confidence of the community.

DECORATION DAY.—The committee having in charge the memorial services connected with the annual decoration of the graves of our deceased soldiers and sailors, (Friday next, May 30th,) respectfully announce that the line will be formed on Allegheny street, right resting on Bishop street, at half past one P. M

The various organizations, Sabbath schools, etc., intending to participate, are requested to meet at their respective rooms, halls, or headquarters at one P. M. sharp, when they will be assigned and conducted to their positions in the procession.

All honorably discharged soldiers and sailors are cordially invited to meet with the Post at their headquarters in the Bush Arcade at the hour above named, ONE P. M. SHARP, and participate in this tribute of respect to the memory of our deceased comrades.

The oration will be delivered at 3 o'clock by Capt. A. W. Norris.

IT is intended to visit all the cemeteries and burying-grounds, decorating with appropriate ceremonies every grave entitled to the honor, so far as they can be ascertained and identified, but the address of the orator of the day will be delivered in Union Cemetery, where the greater number of the dead repose.

The public is respectfully invited to attend.

BY THE COMMITTEE.
